

What to Do if Your Client is Misbehaving, Part XI

By Bradley A. Jackson
Adjunct Professor, UT School of Law

By Scott Rothenberg
Law Offices of Scott Rothenberg

University of Texas School of Law
Continuing Legal Education
30th Annual Admiralty and Maritime
Law Conference

October 15, 2021 4:20 pm to 5:20 pm
Royal Sonesta Hotel, Houston, TX

What are the three most important takeaways from this seminar topic?

FIRST –

Why it is so important that you or your law firm have a comprehensive written representation agreement?

Isn't a handshake or simple agreement on an hourly rate and an initial retainer enough?

New breed of client.

Good news: very small % of client pool.

Bad news: potentially very dangerous.

Insists on winning at all cost, including going after your personal assets, firm assets, reputation, law license, livelihood and insurance coverage, all whether doing so is justified or not.

One of the most potentially dangerous allegations stated by clients in grievances, legal malpractice lawsuits, and fee forfeiture proceedings is, “I would not have gone forward with the representation if the lawyer had disclosed X.”

If a client is willing to testify that an attorney failed to inform him or her about something at the beginning of the representation, and there is no documentation that the information at issue was provided to the client, the matter becomes a disputed issue of fact.

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: What To Do If Your Client Is Misbehaving, Part XI

Also available as part of the eCourse

What To Do If Your Client is Misbehaving, Part XI

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 30th Annual David W. Robertson Admiralty and Maritime Law Conference session
"What To Do If Your Client Is Misbehaving, Part XI"