

(Almost) Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Chapter 11 Plans

November 15, 2018

Aaron Michael Kaufman, Dykema Cox Smith

David W. Parham, Akerman

Alexandra Schwarzman, Kirkland & Ellis LLP

Agenda

1. Substantive Consolidation
2. Artificial Impairment
3. Per Plan vs. Per Debtor

Substantive Consolidation

3

Overview

- Substantive consolidation occurs when courts consolidate the assets and liabilities of different legal entities, providing different lenders with a common asset pool from which to recover.
 - This is different from joint administration under Bankruptcy Rule 1015(b).
- The Code does not expressly authorize substantive consolidation; rather, it is “a construct of federal common law, emanat[ing] from equity.” In re Owens Corning, 419 F.3d 195, 205 (3d Cir. 2005).

4

Impact

- Substantive consolidation can dramatically impact creditor recoveries – both positively and negatively – by altering the pool of assets from which claimants may recover.
- Courts generally seem to agree that substantive consolidation is an extraordinary remedy and ought to be used sparingly. As a creature of common law, however, the doctrine has evolved along various lines and, as a result, different jurisdictions apply different standards.

5

Different Tests

D.C. Circuit	Second Circuit	Third Circuit	Bankr. N.D. Tex.
- The Auto-Train three-part burden-shifting framework - Proponent must make prima facie case showing substantial identity and benefit of sub-con - Burden shifts to objector to show reliance and prejudice - If burden is met, court makes equitable decision	- The Augie/Restivo two-factor test - Economic unity/reliance - Entanglement	- The In re Corning multi-factor analysis - Blends two-part test with burden-shifting framework, creating higher bar than Second Circuit	- The In re ADPT DFW analysis - Sub-con in plan context is appropriate where section 1129 complied with, including: - impaired creditors accept, and best-interests test and absolute priority satisfied

While approaches vary slightly, equitable considerations dominate courts' analyses: (1) protecting creditors' reasonable reliance; (2) a prudential concern over administrability; and (3) a substance-versus-form inquiry into whether entities were, for all practical purposes, separate or unified.

In re Auto-Train Corp., Inc., 810 F.2d 270 (D.C. Cir. 1987); In re Augie/Restivo Baking Co., Ltd., 860 F.2d 515 (2d Cir. 1988); In re Owens Corning, 419 F.3d 195 (3d Cir. 2005); In re ADPT DFW Holdings, LLC, 574 B.R. 87 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2017).

6

Find the full text of this and thousands of other resources from leading experts in dozens of legal practice areas in the UT Law CLE eLibrary \(utcle.org/elibrary\)

Title search: (Almost) Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Chapter 11 Plans

Also available as part of the eCourse

2018 Jay L. Westbrook Bankruptcy eConference

First appeared as part of the conference materials for the 37th Annual Jay L. Westbrook Bankruptcy Conference session

"(Almost) Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Chapter 11 Plans"